ABOUT THE 2012 ASIAN PACIFIC AMERICAN HEALTH SERVICES DIRECTORY

The challenges of culture and language in providing health-related services to Asian/Pacific American communities are vast and varied. Health care providers, human service agencies, and community-based organizations often encounter difficulty in identifying and accessing culturally specific and language appropriate services for their Asian/Pacific American client/patients and their families. This often results in critical gaps in service delivery to and utilization by Asian/Pacific Americans.

The purpose of the 2012 Asian/Pacific American Health Services Directory is to provide a resource of health, social, legal and support services that are culturally specific and language appropriate to Asian/Pacific Americans and their families in Philadelphia.

This Directory was designed for use by health care providers, human service agencies and community-based organizations as a source of information for referral, assistance and support.

This Directory was produced by APAHC—the Asian/Pacific American Health Consortium. It is generously supported by the Philadelphia Department of Public Health, Division of Maternal, Child and Family Health.

While this Directory is not comprehensive, it can be a valuable resource. The publication of information about providers was authorized by the providers themselves. Inclusion in this Directory is not a guarantee of cultural specificity or language appropriateness, and should not be considered an endorsement by the Philadelphia Department of Public Health or APAHC.

It is our hope that this Directory will be a valuable tool in our collective efforts to improve the health of Philadelphia's Asian/Pacific American communities.

John Saito studied art and biology as an undergraduate at Temple University.

In medical school, he has focused on capturing the uniqueness of medical education through photography and paintings with oil on canvas.

“Art in Medicine: Community Care” is one of Saito’s major paintings. He believes
“it captures the emergence of a student into a student-doctor in an Asian community.”

Spring 2012

Dear Provider:

On behalf of the Philadelphia Department of Public Health, I am pleased to present to you the 2012 fourth edition of Philadelphia's Asian/Pacific American Health Services Directory.

Culture and language have long been barriers to receiving health care for many Asian/Pacific Americans. With Philadelphia's own growing population in these communities, we believe it is our shared responsibility to address the demand for services that are both culturally sensitive and language appropriate.

It is our hope that the fourth edition of the Directory will continue to help social service and health care providers identify culturally sensitive and language appropriate services for their Asian/Pacific American consumers. We hope it will encourage providers to work collaboratively for the health and welfare of Philadelphia's diverse Asian/Pacific American communities.

I would like to thank APAHC - the Asian/Pacific American Health Consortium - for its work in helping us prepare the Directory. The Directory represents our ongoing commitment to support the work of APAHC. We are proud to have been a part of the growth of this dedicated group, from its origins as an internal committee of the Department's Division of Maternal, Child & Family Health to its current independent status as a leading voice on Asian/Pacific American health issues throughout Philadelphia.

I hope you will find the Directory a valuable tool in carrying out the important work that you do.

Sincerely,

What is APAHC?

APAHC — the Asian/Pacific American Health Consortium—is a coalition of social service and health care provider organizations dedicated to advocating for the improved health and well being of Philadelphia’s Asian/Pacific American communities.

APAHC is committed to:

- Facilitating access and utilization of health services for Asian/Pacific American families experiencing cultural and language barriers;
- Raising practitioner/provider awareness about the needs of Asian/Pacific Americans seeking health services;
- Advocating for more accurate collection of health statistics for ethnic minorities;
- Advocating for Asian/Pacific American representation in shaping health care activities, programs and policies;
- Working with other coalitions to achieve equal access to quality health care services for individuals and families in Philadelphia.

Accomplishments:

- Producing “In Their Own Words,” an educational video for Southeast Asian women about prenatal care;
- Advocating cultural sensitivity and language access for those on medical assistance in Medicaid HMOs (Health Choices);
- Participating in health planning, priority setting and policy making processes, especially for the Healthy Start Initiative;
- Providing technical assistance and training to a variety of social service and health care providers.

Officers:

Sam T. Pham
Multicultural Project Coordinator
Philadelphia Department of Public Health

Sam T. Pham is the Multicultural Project Coordinator for the Philadelphia Department of Public Health.

Sam serves as the Health Department's staff to the Asian/Pacific American Health Consortium (APAHC), a coalition she was instrumental in organizing in 1992.

Born in Vietnam, Sam has lived in Philadelphia since 1972. She is a recognized leader and advocate for Asian/Pacific American health issues, working extensively with immigrants/refugees, particularly women and children.

Sam previously served as Executive Director for the Mayor's Commission on Asian American Affairs.

The Division of Maternal, Child and Family Health supports a network of service providers that includes health care centers, teaching hospitals and small community agencies. DMCFH implements policies that benefit the health of women, children and families, working closely with other public agencies and advocates throughout Philadelphia's neighborhoods.

Services in your community:

- outreach and education to pregnant women and new mothers
- case management and in-home support for families with infants and young children, including children with special healthcare needs.
- sexual assault survivor counseling

Services at city health care centers:

- confidential family planning counseling
- birth control supplies
- prenatal and well-baby care
- gynecological care
- STD treatment and HIV testing
- fertility and options counseling
- prenatal smoking cessation counseling
- nutrition counseling and education

Nutrition and health education:

- education for the community and health care providers
- training and education on breastfeeding
- original materials in English, Spanish, and several other languages that reflect Philadelphia's diversity
